Koules Fortress

The Venice of the East, as it was described during the Venetian rule, Koules is the trademark of the medieval city of Heraklion. Koules Fortress was built in 1523-1540 offering a spectacular view to the Cretan Sea, and is the vigilant sentry that protects the city of Heraklion.

Tomb of N. Kazantzakis

The tomb of the most beloved writer of Crete is located on the southern part of the Venetian Walls, on the highest point of the Venetian fortification at the Martinego cavalier. Its wooden cross bears his famous quote: I hope for nothing. I fear nothing. I am free. ### St. Markus Basilica

St. Markus basilica is also located at Venizelou square and now used as: lecture hall, exhibitions, other cultural events and houses the municipal library too. Built by the Venetians in 1239. The Dukes used to attend the church services and also got buried there. From the entrance of the church the public herald announced (verbally) the Dukes' directives to the people.

Venetian Walls

The Venetian walls represent the most formidable project of Venetian rule. They were first built in the 15th century whereas extensions and improvements were carried out during the 16th and 17th centuries. The main architect was one of the famous army engineers of the 16th century, Michele San Michele of Verona. The perimeter has a length of 3 km reinforced with three ramparts which are still maintained. It has four gates: the pier gate at the harbour, the gate of Lazaretto, the gate of the Pantocrator or Panigra known today as the gate of Chania, and the fourth gate is on the south side called the gate of Jesus or new gate. Proceeding along the perimeter we reach the impregnable bastion of Martinego, the highest point on a peak where the walls meet forming a triangle into the peninsula. Here in lies the tomb of Nikos Kazantzakis (1883-1957) from where one can enjoy a panoramic a breathtaking view.

Saint Minas Cathedral

is the metropolitan church situated at Agia Ekaterini square. Built during 1862- 1895 is one of the most impressive churches as regards size and position. It is in the shape of a cross with a dome and four equidistant pillars. On the western corner of the metropolitan church is a tiny, older church of Agios Minas (again) which has ornate wood carvings and icons from the 18th century. It is not known when it was built.

This small church since 1735 functioned for a substantial period of time as the metropolitan church until displaced by the big church. Nearby the archbisopric of Crete is located.

St. Titus Church

Along, past the middle of 25th August street, on the left side is the square where St. Titus is located, the protector of the island. Initially a Byzantine temple and during its many historical phases suffered substantial damages: renovations including major alterations by the Venetians in the 16th century and used as the metropolitan church by the Catholics. During Turkish rule it was converted into a mosque- the "Vezir mosque", destroyed in the big earthquake of 1856, rebuilt on its own foundations in 1872.

In 1926 it again became an Orthodox church after undergoing relative repairs and alterations. The combination of a variety of architectural elements can be seen supporting its multi-faceted history. Within St. Titus is preserved the skull of the saint after it had been returned from Venice where it was initially sent during the sacking of Heraklion by the Turks.

Morozini Fountain

This is situated in the center of Venizelou square, inaugurated by the Venetian administrator Francesco Morozini. Water issues from spouts in the mouths of four lions, dating from the 14th century, the decor of the eight troughs of the fountain consist of reliefs from scenes in Greek mythology on top of which is ensconced a gigantic statue of Poseidon holding his trident which unfortunately got destroyed during Turkish rule. The fountain was connected to the aqueduct (also constructed by Morozini) transporting waters from the Yuchta slopes to Heraklion.
